A store with everything – almost

Feed, fuel and a v

Need an 80-pound burlap bag of hay cubes? How about some "horse" carrots for a friendly pal? Chances are Upland Feed and Fuel Retail Store has it or knows where to get it.

The store opened in Chino in 1896, dealing exclusively with the sale of hay, coal and wood. Several years later it moved to a location next door to its current 164 N. Second Avenue site. It made that final move next door in 1947.

Atwood's, the family fashion store, and Upland Feed and Fuel Retail are among the oldest businesses in the city.

Upland Feed and Fuel once had its own mill located behind the store to process its own poultry feed.

Though the mill is gone now, the store still sells hay and coal, but its list of goods has expanded to include everything from cockatiels to feed, from eggs to craft items.

"I think the conglomeration of items we sell definitely has helped us. It probably has helped us survive," said Ray Stump, store owner-manager.

Feed is available in one-pound to one-ton bags. The store also sells bulky 100-pound sacks of coal for people with fireplaces and old pot belly stoves.

For years Upland Feed and Fuel was owned by Dwight and Eldon Bert and Oren and Kenneth Decker. Later Stump purchased the portion of the store selling retail items, adding "retail" to the store's name.

Stump started working for the business in the mill behind the Second Avenue store. He then became a store trainee. He worked there until purchasing part of the business.

Slowly through the years, the store's departments have changed from milling its own feed to handling eggs whole lot more from area chicken ranches.

"We started developing pet items after the eggs and now we're very heavy into grooming," Stump said. "The store has been through two remodelings and two expansions as we have adapted it because of the demise of the agricultural activities in the area."

In a small room at the store, Donna Skura grooms dogs. It's just another service the store offers, he said.

Growth prompted Stump to open a satellite store in Alta Loma.

Customers still purchase 20 tons of hay a week. Although most of the citrus groves and agricultural activities in the Upland area are gone, many area residents still have horses, he said.

"We have tried to recognize and prepare for the needs of our customers. Some of the requests we have received from our customers have resulted in the store carrying certain items," the store manager said.

An Upland homeowner with horses asked Stump about a particular vitamin for her animals. She gave him the name, address and phone number of the Connecticut distributor. Stump said he called, ordered the item and now the store handles it.

"That's just characteristic of this store. We want people to think of it as a friendly place to shop. We've had a reputation of caring about individual needs. Right now a customer wants me to find old egg scales. I don't know if I'll find it but I'll try," he said.

The store's owners have toyed with the idea of moving out of the downtown Upland area. The idea was rejected, though, because the owners have seen other businesses leave for other Upland locations and go out of business, he said.

Stump said many of the store's customers have been going there for years. "It's a nice feeling to see the ones once in diapers now coming in with kids of their own," he said.

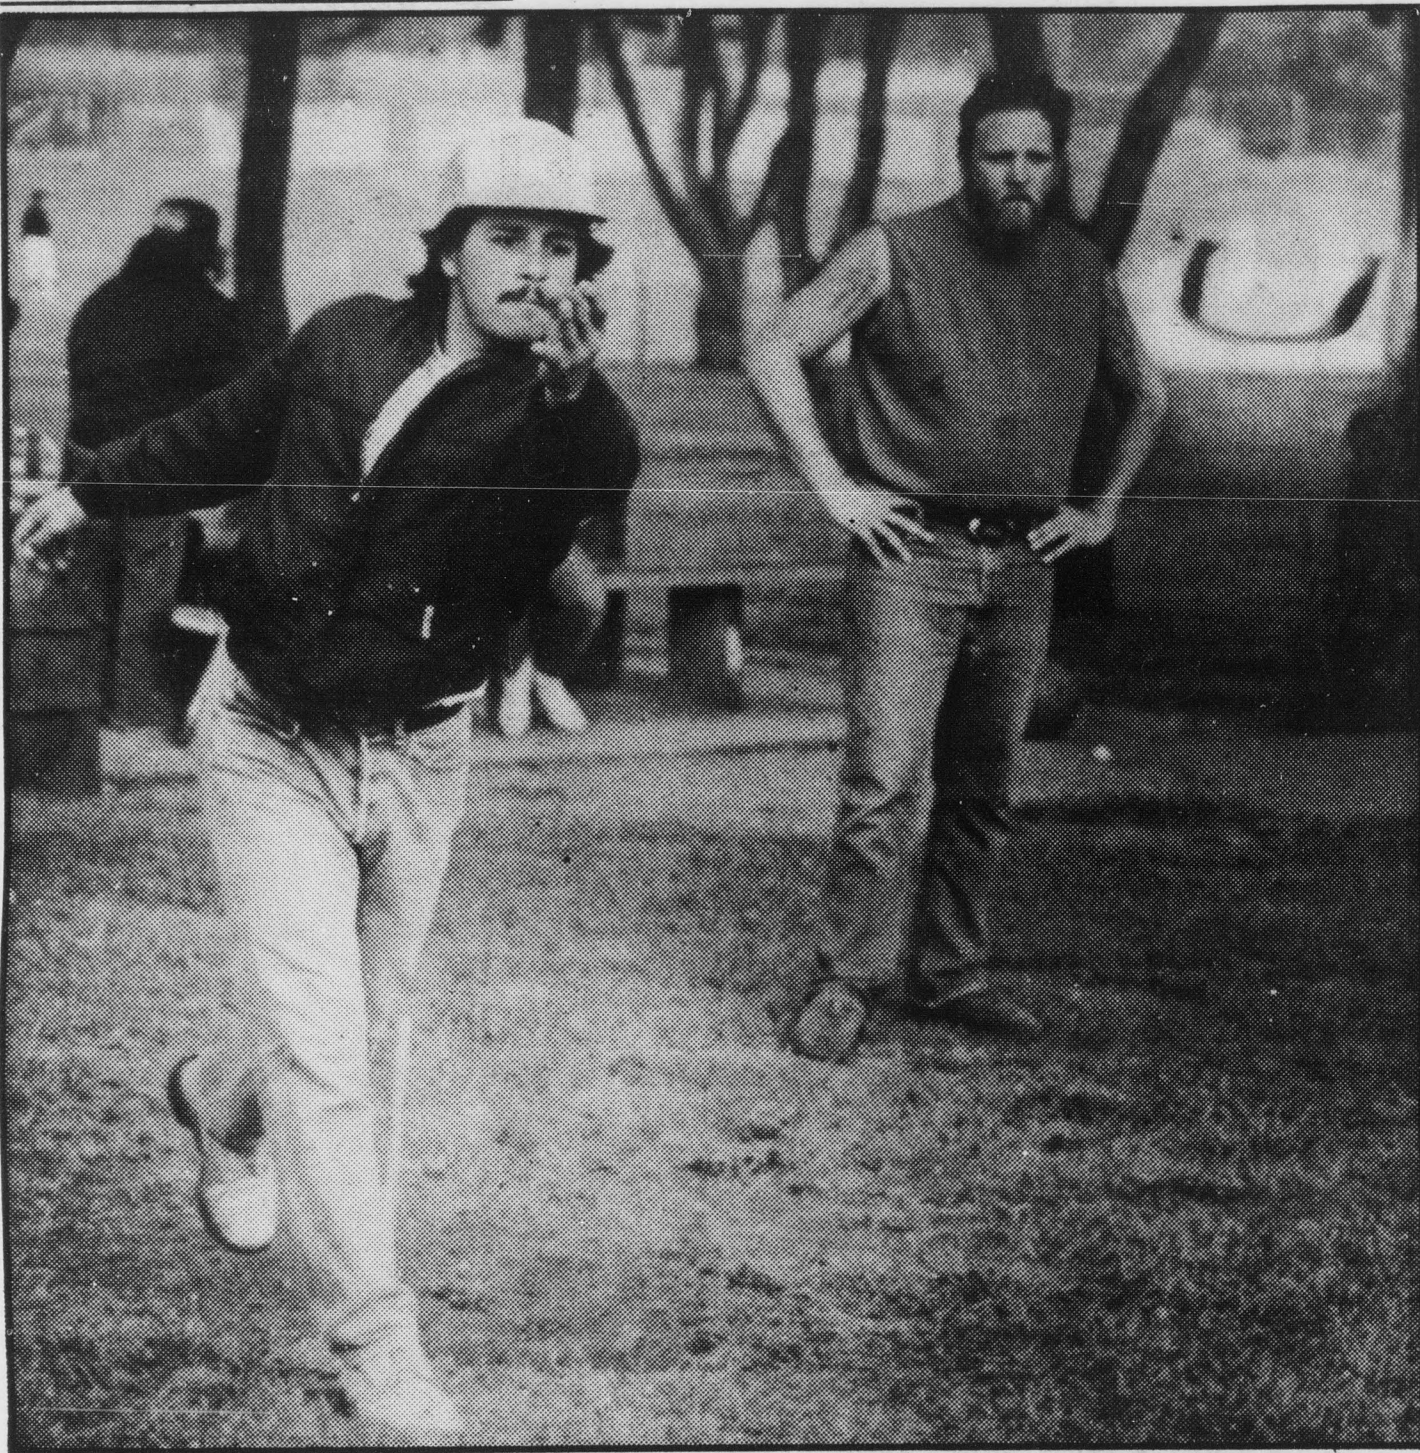

Selling a variety of goods has proved difficult but Stump said he wouldn't change it. "If someone wanted an easier store to run he wouldn't be running this one but he wouldn't have the challenge I do."

"We're small enough to care and large enough to take care of the customers' needs," the manager said. □

If Fifi or Rover have been better behaved than usual, dog owners may want to surprise them with gourmet lamb and rice loaf (top left) found in Upland Feed and Fuel's frozen food section. Rose Munoz, store employee, tries to decide which color of ribbon it will be for her current craft display (bottom left). Donna Skura trims "Chili" the poodle (top right) in the store's animal grooming section. Natalie and Deanna Calderon of Ontario (bottom right) admire one of more than 20 fish tanks in the store. On the cover: Ray Stump started working for Upland Feed and Fuel Retail when all the store sold was feed and hay. He now manages a store which sells just about everything.

Ten teams vie for honors in R.C.'s 1st horseshoe tourney

By Terri Tirella

Close only counts in horseshoes.

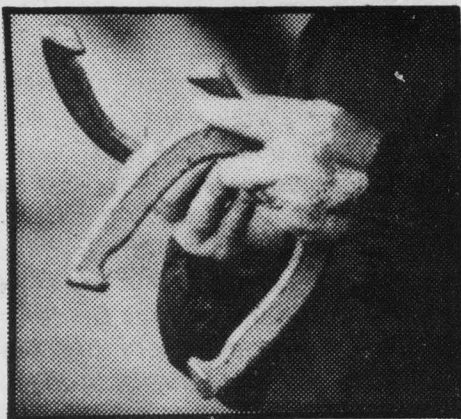

And family ties counted too in Rancho Cucamonga's first horseshoe tournament.

Ten teams vied recently for honor on the damp fields of Vineyard Park, where makeshift horseshoe pits were set up for the competition.

The Almenderas family of Chino, were among the top winners in the tournament. Glen Almenderas took first in the open competition with Tony Vicarro, his daughter Phyllis and her partner Bob Irvin took first in the coed division. Pete Almenderas, Glen's son, placed second with partner Mike Savala, in the open division.

Pete said he concentrates on ringing the peg when throwing shoes and everyone in the family except his mother plays horseshoes. Another son, Ben, also competed.

Phyllis Almenderas was drafted into the Rancho Cucamonga tournament and didn't meet her partner until that day. "He asked me if I played horseshoes. I said sure, I'll play."

Even though she has been playing horseshoes for about five years, Phyllis said she has not developed any special technique. "I just throw it to touch the little stake."

She said players plan teams in advance but sometimes go to tournaments alone and match up with other singles to compete. "Sometimes they win even if they've never met."

The horseshoe throwing competition was held in two divisions, doubles of either male or female teams, and an open division for coed teams, said Kevin Evans, recreation supervisor.

Team stamina was tested in intermittent drizzles, according to Evans. Competition was held in a "round robin" fashion. Every team had the opportunity to play against every other team.

Individual trophies were given to each team player of the top three teams. A team trophy was presented to those placing in the fourth-through-sixth slots.

"This is the first time we have held the tournament by itself," Evans said. "We have run horseshoe tournaments in conjunction with the city's Fourth of July picnics and when Etiwanda celebrated its 100 years."

Evans said future tournaments on a quarterly basis are being studied.

The tournament was an adult program, with participant age requirements set at 18 years and

Actress Patty Duke is surrounded by autograph-seeking students at Cucamonga Junior High School. The 38-year-old star of the television series "Hail To The Chief" talked about her 30-year career at the school's annual Career Day.

Actress Patty Duke visits R.C. class

By KAREN PYKE

Lynn Ashcraft didn't really expect that student Scott Duke was related to actress Patty Duke. But the Cucamonga Junior High School drama teacher asked him anyway on the first day of class.

When Scott said that Miss Duke was his aunt, Ashcraft suggested he ask her to come and speak to her drama class, the teacher recalled.

And so he did and his famous aunt accepted. "I would go just about any place Scott asked me to go," said Miss Duke, a resident of Los Angeles.

Miss Duke, who dropped the "Astin" from her surname when she and actor John Astin divorced, fielded questions about her career from several drama classes at the school's career day last week.

The 38-year-old actress discussed her 30-year career, which includes an Academy Award in 1962 for her portrayal of Helen Keller in "The Miracle Worker," an Emmy in 1980 for her role as Anne Sullivan in a television rendition of the same movie; "The Patty Duke Show" from 1963-66, the short lived series "It Takes Two," and her new television series "Hail To The Chief," in which she plays the first female president of the United States.

Duke, who still wears her dishwater blond hair — which she readily admits has been dyed since she was a child — in the characteristic Duke-flip, followed her brother, Ray Duke, into acting when she was 8. Ray, a Rancho Cucamonga resident who is an actor and owner of a vending business, was acting in the docu-drama, "The Deep Well" in New York, when someone was needed to play the role of his younger sister. "That's how I got into show business," Duke said. "It was nepotism."

"I hated it to begin with," she said. "Then it became my whole life. It isn't anymore. I have children who are the larger part of my life."

Duke has five sons — three are Astin's sons from a previous marriage and two are from her marriage to Astin. She said her sons are "mostly ... very proud" of their famous parents. However, the three older sons don't like the intrusions from fans when they are out with their parents in public. But "the two little ones like it so much they've become actors," she said.

Mackenzie Astin, 11, is on the television series "The Facts of Life" and 14-year-old Sean Astin will star in Steven Spielberg's upcoming movie "Goonies," according to Duke.

The actress recalled that before she had children she always said she would never permit them to be child actors. But she changed her mind when she realized that not all child

Bridal Bouquets

by Deborah Armbruster

VEILED HINTS

Although you have many choices—picture hats, garlands, flowers and more—when it comes to wedding headattire, most brides still choose some form of veil.

If your gown has a train, you can opt for a chapel veil—one which sweeps the floor for a foot or more. For a floor-length gown, you might choose a fingertip veil—one which reaches to mid-thigh.

A shorter gown, or one with lovely back detail, might call for a flyaway veil. It's shoulder-length and usually full, with several layers.

A mantilla is usually lace-trimmed, drapes the head and shoulders, either without a headpiece or, Spanish-style, with a high comb. A blusher is usually an extra piece that can be worn over the face when you're walking down the aisle. Swept back later, it gives a multi-layered effect from the back.

Detachable veils are a good idea for the bride who plans to be active at her reception. This allows you to keep your headpiece on. Most veils can be made this way. Here's a hint for the perfect wedding: Contact your bridal experts for all your Wedding needs. You'll find us at DEBORAH'S BRIDAL.

Mother, daughter find one another after 20 long years

By Suzanne Sproul

Shirley Pepper of Upland was 19 years old, pregnant and had no one to turn to when she decided to give up her daughter for adoption.

"I was 19 and dumb. I didn't have a place to live, a job or an income, so I gave my daughter up. Somehow, though, I always knew we'd get together again," Pepper said last Wednesday, choking back tears.

Her premonition came true last week. She and her 20-year-old daughter were reunited.

She said she spent the first few years glancing at every baby she saw in stores and in public, hoping to see "her" baby.

The 39-year-old Upland mother since has married and has her own family now but she said she never forgot about the daughter she gave up.

Her daughter, too, never gave up thinking about her biological mother. Kris Lowies of Azusa, now a mother herself, has spent the last six years trying to find her mother. Two weeks ago she succeeded while looking through the local phone book.

Lowies, when she was 14, asked her adopted mother in Azusa for information about her biological mother. When she turned 19 she went to the Los Angeles agency which handled her adoption and demanded information.

After receiving sketchy information, Lowies determined that her mother lived in San Bernardino County. So she researched public records at the Ontario Public Library, but didn't find what she wanted. In a moment of desperation, she resorted to the phone book and found what appeared to be her mother's name.

"Last Wednesday I had just got home from shopping and my son's baseball game when the phone rang. The girl told me she was looking for a woman. She told me the names of the woman's mother and father," Mrs. Pepper said. "I asked her where she was calling from and she told me. The only thing I could say was, 'Oh my God, are you my daughter?'"

Mrs. Pepper said she knew her daughter had been adopted in the Pasadena area but didn't know the exact location or any other information. "I also thought I should stay out of her life and not interrupt it, but I always knew she would look me up," she said.

The two since have met, hugged and attempted to catch up on the past 20 years. Mrs. Lowies apparently doesn't have any ill feelings toward her mother and seems eager to get acquainted.

"My family and all my friends are so happy that we're finally together again. I'm a grandmother even — and didn't know it," the Upland mother said with a laugh.

Mother, daughter and members of their respective families planned a reunion last weekend.

"Both of us now are trying to find her father. All I can say is that for the first time in my life I can relax and be happy. No one could be happier than I am," Pepper said. "I hope no one goes through what we had to but I hope if they do they remember not to hesitate trying to find each other. Don't worry about skeletons. There's nothing like being together." □

Rancho Cucamonga's Recreation Division is sponsoring a Senior Hobby Fair on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Neighborhood Center, 9791 Arrow Highway. Alta Loma resident Dorothy Gloss puts finishing touches on an oil painting she plans to enter in the competition.

Foothill and Archibald targeted

Law enforcement officers will concentrate traffic safety patrol on Foothill Boulevard and Archibald Avenue from May 4 through 10.

Rancho Cucamonga Sheriff's deputies will be issuing citations to motorists who commit traffic violations.

Deputies remind drivers that when an emergency vehicle passes, motorists are not to follow at a distance of less than 300 feet. This applies to sheriff, fire and rescue vehicles, as well as ambulances.

Motorists should also maintain a 300-foot distance from the scene of an emergency unless directed to drive closer, deputies say.

Rebecca Curtin joins cheerleading squad

Rebecca Curtin, former Upland High School dance/drill team member, has been selected for the cheerleading squad at California State University at San Bernardino.

Curtin, a freshman, joins four other girls named to the squad.

"I think we've got an excellent group of girls with a tremendous amount of energy. Already they have started functioning as a cohesive group," said Ellen Kowalski, school cheerleader adviser.

actors have to have an experience that is as "bizarre" as her own had been.

Duke only vaguely referred to the childhood she spent living with a husband-wife team that managed her career. Her brother explained that the couple convinced her divorced mother that it would be better for Duke's career if she lived with them.

When Duke was 8-years-old, this couple changed her name from Anna Marie to Patty. "Anna Marie is dead now. You're Patty now," Duke recalled they told her. "In real life I'm Anna," she added.

Duke recommended to the drama students that they continue their education through college if they want to make it in acting. As a child in New York, where there is no law requiring child actors to have private tutors, Duke took correspondence classes. She had no social life and her school work suffered as a result.

Gas station convenience stores reviewed

By Suzanne Sproul

Lifting the city's ban against gas station convenience markets could result in more accidents, traffic congestion and an increase in misdemeanor and felony crimes, according to an Upland planning report.

Staff presented the report last week to the Upland Planning Commission at the request of the Upland City Council. The council asked for the report because of numerous requests by convenience store companies to build the markets in the city.

City codes do not provide for such businesses.

The National Convenience Store Company is the latest business to ask the city to build a market. The company wanted to rezone a parcel on Campus Avenue.

Although staff presented a detailed report, it recommended continuing the hearing on the city code amendment until May 23. The planning commission concurred and the public hearing was continued.

Eventually the proposal will be brought back before the city council for action.

The planning commission reviewed the proposed change earlier this year and recommended to the city council not to allow the markets.

The city council, however, in February directed staff to draft an ordinance allowing the markets. The draft ordinance then needed to be reviewed by the planning commission.

Upland is the last West Valley city to change its ordinance to allow such markets. Ontario, Fontana, Montclair, Rancho Cucamonga and Chino allow them subject to specific zoning requirements.

Staff told the planning commission it had accumulated as much information about the proposed code change that it could since late February when the city council asked for the review. Months of work would be needed to analyze data pertaining to crime and accident statistics related to the gas station-convenience markets.

"In the absence of such data, it is only professional opinion that the social costs to the community are likely to outweigh the apparent benefits of increasing convenience to shoppers and enhancement of economic benefits to the business operators and city tax base," Planning Director Bill Young said in his report.

Young said he will attempt to contact the convenience store companies that have shown an interest in Upland.

In addition to potential traffic and crime concerns, the stores could create light, glare and noise problems located in residential areas, the report said.

The planning department is proposing prohibiting construction of the stores closer than 200 feet from property zoned for any residential or commercial-professional activities.

The proposed code amendment stipulates the stores could sell convenience items but not alcohol. □

Pfc. Deana Purkeypile a medical specialist in the Army, has been assigned to 45 days of temporary duty as a hometown recruiter aide at the Army's Upland Recruiting Station.

During her assignment, Purkeypile will be assisting local Army recruiters and talking to interested men and women about her experiences as a soldier in the Army.

Purkeypile was trained in her military occupational specialty at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Following her temporary duty here the soldier will be assigned to Fort Shafter, Hawaii.

Purkeypile is the daughter of Melvin and Dorothy Purkeypile of Alta Loma.

Airman Barry C. Talbot, son of Roberta J. Brubaker of Upland, has been assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate of arts degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airmen will now receive specialized instruction in the aircraft maintenance field.

Pvt. Juan M. Nuci, son of Guadalupe Nuci of Rancho Cucamonga, has completed an Army metalworker course at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

Students received instruction in all phases of oxyacetylene, arc and inert metal welding. They also learned to identify and use hand tools, measuring instruments and power tools, and to identify metals.

Pfc. Scott A. McClure, son of Carol E. and Don A. Heinz of Alta Loma, has graduated as an armor crewman at the U.S. Army Armor School, Fort Knox, Ky.

The training was conducted under the one-station unit training program, which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training into one 13-week period.

During the course, students received training in the duties of a tank crewman, including firing the tank's armament and small weapons. Instruction was also given in field radio operations, map reading and tank maintenance and repair.

He is a 1984 graduate of Alta Loma High School.

David W. Schilling, son of Roy A. and Doris R. Schilling of Upland, has been promoted in the U.S. Air Force to the rank of master sergeant.

Schilling is a fire control systems technician at Fairchild Air Force Base, Wash., with the 92nd Bombardment Wing.

The sergeant is a 1969 graduate of Temple City High School.

With rose out, white wine 'in'; try pink 'blanc'

By Dan Berger
Copley News Service

Rose is out. As enjoyable as a good rose can be, it just doesn't sell. People think it's gauche to order rose.

White wine, on the other hand, is "in," so wine makers have figured out a way to get people to buy pink wine without calling it by an "out" name.

They are making a wine they call "blanc." The word is French and it means white, so you'd think that by buying a wine that has the word "blanc" in its title you'd be buying a white wine.

Wrong. I'd say that about 98 percent of the stuff that comes out with the name Zinfandel Blanc, or Blanc de Pinot Noir or some such is nothing more than a pale rose.

Not that there is anything wrong with this, of course. Some of these pale-pink efforts are quite enjoyable.

Recently, my tasting group and I delved into 20 "white" wines made from the dark-red Zinfandel grape, all made in 1984.

Zinfandel, one of California's most-planted varieties, makes a traditional red table wine, but it has become hard to sell as a red wine due to a variety of reasons. So to make something out of it that sells, many wine makers are turning to White Zinfandel.

It's not hard to make a white wine from black or red grapes. Since the color in any wine comes from the pigment in the skins, all you have to do is crush the grapes and make sure the skins don't go into the juice.

However, if a wine maker makes certain no color is permitted into the wine, the resulting wine will have very little character, since the key attractiveness about fresh, youthful Zinfandel is its strawberrylike fruitiness. And that fruitiness is a characteristic that resides in the skins. To avoid all skin contact is to make a wine without much charm.

In practice, wine makers permit the Zinfandel grape skins to stay in contact with the juice for a time, just long enough to yield some of that strawberryish fruit.

Upland Night at Dodger Stadium set

Tickets are now available for Upland Night at Dodger Stadium sponsored by the Upland Chamber of Commerce.

Uplanders will converge on Dodger Stadium on Thursday, May 30 to watch the Dodgers play the Philadelphia Phillies.

Buses provided by Richard Harney and Wayne Fritz of Palomar Transport will leave the corner of First and C streets in downtown Upland promptly at 5:45 p.m.

Before the game begins, Upland Mayor Richard Anderson, Upland Police Chief Coy Estes, Chamber President Bill Rugg and Chamber Office Manager Lisa Giles will participate in pre-game ceremonies.

The $7.50 per-person ticket includes bus transportation and stadium seating. To purchase tickets, call the chamber at 982-8816 or stop by the office at 886 W. Foothill Blvd. between Mountain and San Antonio avenues.

Inspiration for the reluctant gardeners

Are you ready to take the plunge into the world of gardening? Come and join the millions of other gardeners across the country who garden for recreation, exercise, a beautiful display or for the edible harvest — and many do so for all four reasons.

When the urge to plant arrives, keep in mind there's always somewhere to plant. Outdoor flower beds come to mind, but don't let a lack of ground space put a damper on your enthusiasm to get in there and plant. Try hanging baskets, a wine barrel, planter boxes, small borders or edgings, window boxes. Let your imagination run wild.

Even a bag of potting soil can be used by cutting slits in the top and sides of the bag and planting. You'll be the proud owner of a veritable mass of blooms or an edible garden that's easy to move. How about an old tire filled with soil and herbs or an old bathtub brimming with flowering annuals? These are fun projects and easy to do.

Let's say you do have room in your garden. Start small, adding on as you go along. Don't let your spirits be dampened by the overwhelming responsibility of a large plot. For example, an adequate vegetable plot for beginners is 15 by 25 feet. Or use containers where many vegetables grow abundantly and are attractive.

A trip to your nearby garden center will leave you brimming with dozens of new and helpful facts and inspiration. Keep your eyes open for posters and signs right along bedding plant displays. Plant labels, usually stuck in every pot and pack, are good information sources, too.

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Pretty bad, very bad, dreadful best describes film 'Tomboy'

By Bill Hagen
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Sometimes it's easy to forget the awesome power that goes with this job, and the attendant responsibility.

It seems like less than a month ago, for instance, that I was suggesting that it wouldn't be an intolerable idea if Betsy Russell made some more movies. Hey, you think someone out there wasn't paying attention?

Now, in a few short weeks, along comes Russell in a movie called "Tomboy." Is that power? (I'm jesting, of course.)

"Tomboy" was likely in the can, in a manner of speaking, for quite a while.)

The responsibility is that I obviously wasn't specific enough. What I had in mind was that perhaps the time had come for Russell to start inching her way up the ladder, to start working with good directors and good actors. At least better directors and better actors. Alas, such is hardly the case with "Tomboy," which is a giant career step backward.

I probably should have suspected something was amiss, right from the start. Anyone who casts Russell in the role of a tomboy is immediately suspect. I mean, would you cast, say, Lily Tomlin for the title role in "The Dolly Parton Story?" Casting Russell as a tomboy is tantamount, although maybe not on such a grand scale.

Anyhow, "Tomboy" begins all right, with a little girl hitting a home run in a kind of Little League baseball game and being hugged by her father. This is during the opening credits. From there on it gets pretty bad. Very bad, actually.

Now we zoom to the room of the little girl, now nicely grown, and learn from stuff on the walls of the room that her father was an astronaut, a hero. Since he never again is in the movie, you have to wonder why that's important.

The alarm goes off, and the big girl reluctantly rises and takes a shower. Then she goes to her job as an automobile mechanic, pausing only long enough to embarrass some boys with her shooting ability in a playground basketball game. When she gets to work she immediately starts inventing stuff and fixing a rich guy's car and chatting with a girlfriend who drops by.

At day's end she goes to watch her girlfriend audition for something that involves gyrations and kicking and spinning and jumping gracefully. Dancing, I think it's called nowadays. Then she watches her girlfriend take a shower. We're talking world-class breast fetish here. These girls will pop into a shower or pool at the drop of a bead of sweat.

Well, the tomboy goes to an orgiastic party with her girlfriend — the pool is buoyant with breasts — and meets the world's greatest race car driver, who is all of 19 or 20. She has long admired him from afar, and they will now admire each other from anear.

BANJO PICKIN' — Contestants like Skip Ewing of Rancho Cucamonga will compete for musical instruments and $1,200 cash in Calico Ghost Town's 13th annual Fiddle, Banjo, Guitar and Band Contest May 11 and 12. Nearly 800 top musicians have been invited to participate in what is now the oldest fiddle and banjo contest in the state. Contestants may register by calling 780-8810.

Yet what that does is to give the wine a slight amount of pinkish color. Sometimes, in its lightest state, that color is a mere copper or coral tone. As the grape skins stay in the juice for greater lengths of time, the color darkens, and in some cases the wine takes on a definite pink hue — in fact, it becomes a rose.

Now, you might think that a wine maker making a pink Zinfandel "blanc" would want to disguise the fact that he has made a rose, but no, quite paradoxically, they are so proud of the fact that their "white" wines are pink they put them into clear bottles so you can see the exact color.

In our recent tasting, the colors ranged from the pale pinkness of the Geyser Peak to the deeper-hued Belvedere and Bel Arbres, with more delicate pinkish hues in between of the De Loach and Bandiera.

Most white Zinfandels sell for between $4 and $5 a bottle. Now white Zinfandel is appearing in big bottles from giant producers. Paul Masson has a 1984 White Zinfandel in 1.5-liter bottles that sells for $4.99, and Geyser Peak is offering a lower-priced version of White Zinfandel under its Summit label at $3 for 1.5 liters.

The winners of my tasting of 1984 White Zinfandels were from Madrona, Paul Masson, Shenandoah and Bel Arbres.

The Madrona had enough spritz in it to taste a bit like champagne, but the attractive fruit-spice aroma and clean, crisp finish offset its slight sweetness. The Paul Masson had one of the more complex aromas and tastes, with a spice not unlike muscat. It was softer and sweeter than many, but well crafted.

The Shenandoah had a berrylike taste and was a fine quaffing wine, and the Bel Arbres was one of the most complex wines with a lovely balanced taste.

RESTAURANT SPOTLIGHT:

GRAZIANO'S Italian Restaurant

Graziano's Italian Restaurant, 1615 North Mountain Avenue in Upland is surely one of the finest authentic Italian restaurants to be found in the West Valley. With a touch of elegance, coupled with the warm family atmosphere, the restaurant follows the tradition of Southern Italy offering a cuisine both spicy and delicious.

The family owned and operated business has been serving West Valley patrons since 1971, with specialties including Veal Cutlet Parmesan, Eggplant Rollatine, Fettuccine "Alfredo" and Linguini with Clam Sauce. Other not-to-be missed specialties include pizzas with a variety of traditional toppings and more than 50 sandwiches designed to please even the most persnickety palate. All sandwiches are made to order with a choice of cheeses: Mozzarella, Provolone, Swiss or Pepper Cheese. Imported Capocollo, Salami, Pastrami, Roast Beef, Meta Ball, Sausage, Ham, Veal and even Eggplant Filled sandwiches for hungry customers.

Special sandwiches including the Vegetarian, the Beefsteak and the Monster, as well as an Italian hamburger or cheeseburger are available for take out as well as dining in.

Dan and Mona Guida, owners of Graziano's said they have tried to create a classy atmosphere in which families can relax and enjoy. "You don't need to wear a suit and tie to our restaurant", Dan said.

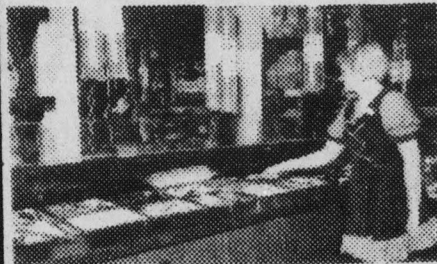

Dan and Mona keep the family in the business, with Danny, Janet and Kenny Guida all working with mom and dad.

True to the Italian decor and charming atmosphere patrons can find a romantic little alcove with which to romance someone special with a glass of wine chosen from the restaurant's lengthy wine list.

Daily lunch and dinner specials are offered. All dinners include a choice of soup or salad, garlic or cheese bread, coffee or tea.

The antipasto buffet table, open all day and evening, features crisp green lettuce, marinated mushrooms, marinated artichokes, three bean salad, pizza, hot meatballs, sausage, bread, cheeses, olives, peppers, and many more delicious things or toroni to try.

Top off your meal with one of the many Italian pastries, Italian ices or cheese cake with fresh strawberries. For a more sophisticated flare you might try capucino ice cream, espresso ice cream, spumoni toroni.

Antipasto Buffet Table

Graziano's Italian Restaurant is located in the Mountain Plaza, Upland, at the corner of 16th Street and Mountain Avenue. Hours are 11 AM to 10 PM Monday through Sunday. (LOCATED IN THE LUCKY SHOPPING CENTER)

Waiting for a better

Some area handicapped residents who depend on the Omnitrans transit system to transport them in their wheelchairs are not pleased with the services. They are downright angry.

Dennis Toomey, Bruce Francisco, and Randall Daugherty, three wheelchair-dependent residents of Woodhaven Manor Apartments at the corner of Lemon and Haven avenues in Rancho Cucamonga, and Toomey's nurse-attendant, Lillian DeLawrence, are disappointed with the service.

They cited inadequate and too few hook-ups to secure wheelchairs on city buses, limited bus schedules and routes, lifts that don't always work, and two-hour waits for Dial-A-Lift as some of the problems with which they have to contend.

"They are horrible," said Daugherty, a quadriplegic. "We've been trying to improve them for a long time."

"I'm so stinking disgusted," DeLawrence shouted angrily. "This is a rotten world," she said, adding that people don't want to provide more money to improve services for less-abled individuals because "they might lose a few bucks here and there or a steak off the table."

Her ire centered on an accident Toomey had on one of the buses on October 23, 1984. DeLawrence, who often speaks for Toomey or reiterates what he has said to those who do not understand his speech, which is impaired by cerebral palsy, explained what happened. A tie-down, which was securing the rear of Toomey's wheelchair, released as the bus driver took a corner.

Toomey tumbled forward in his wheelchair and struck his head. He sustained a gash above his left eye requiring 10 stitches. While DeLawrence and another passenger uprighted Toomey in his chair, the bus driver offered no help. She was more concerned with reporting the accident to Omnitrans than with helping Toomey, etter ride

DeLawrence said.

"Those drivers don't have no c. kind of training for something like that.... And they take those corners too damn fast," DeLawrence said.

Sig Dellhime, an administrative assistant for Omnitrans, refused to comment on the accident because of a pending lawsuit Toomey has brought against the bus company.

Ken Conners, chairman of Access California, which enforces handicap compliance for San Bernardino County, said that he investigated Toomey's accident but took no action because he learned that DeLawrence had placed Toomey's wheelchair in the hook-up prior to the accident. He said that the bus drivers are supposed to secure wheelchairs in place.

DeLawrence said, however, that the drivers don't do it. "One of them told me, 'That's not my job,'" she said. "I have to do all these things while they stand there and look at me." She said that after she places Toomey's chair in the hook-up, the bus drivers sometimes look to see if he is in securely. Prior to the accident, the bus driver "was right there when I backed him in" the tie-down, she added.

Toomey doesn't ride the bus alone anymore. "He used to go to the movies. He used to do his own shopping.... He used to go to the mall and buy his own shirts. He doesn't do it anymore," DeLawrence said. Now he is dependent on someone to accompany him. "Is that the way a handicap has to live?" she asked.

Toomey received a letter in November from Omnitrans offering "sincerest apologies for the inconvenience" and a ticket good for one free bus fare because "when you have had a bad experience on our buses, we're serious about making it up to you."

Meanwhile, the tie-downs have slipped loose from Toomey's wheelchair three or four more times since the accident, DeLawrence said.

Even when the hook-up does work, the front of the wheelchair swings back and forth, according to DeLawrence. Toomey, Francisco, and Daugherty agreed that they would like to see Omnitrans install a front-wheel hook-up as well.

"I slide all over," Daugherty said. "If I couldn't hold on, I'd probably be in the driver's seat."

Though the federal government's 1973 Rehabilitation Act, which went into effect in 1977, requires that buses provide electric wheelchair access, the Omnitrans hook-up does not fit the fatter and smaller electric chairs' wheels, Conners said. "We are giving Omnitrans about another 30 days, then we will force compliance through CalTrans (California Department of Transportation)," he said.

Francisco, Daugherty and Toomey also complained about a lack of wheelchair accessibility to the city buses.

A stipulation tied to federal funding of public transportation since 1969 requires that all new buses be wheelchair accessible. Currently, 41 of Omnitrans's 75 buses can handle one wheelchair per bus, according to Jean Koenig, who is in charge of special transportation for Omnitrans.

Daugherty said he once waited six hours for a bus before one came that had wheelchair accessibility and didn't already have a wheelchair on it.

"It's the only bus company I know of that has only one tie-down per bus," Conners said. This means that a married couple can never ride together, he added.

Omnitrans has received a $100,000 grant from the Urban Mass Transportation Administration to install a second wheelchair tie-down mechanism for each bus with existing accessibility, according to Dellhime.

He said that the grant is more than enough to cover the expense and that the remainder will be used to install seat belts to go over the chair and prevent it from swinging.

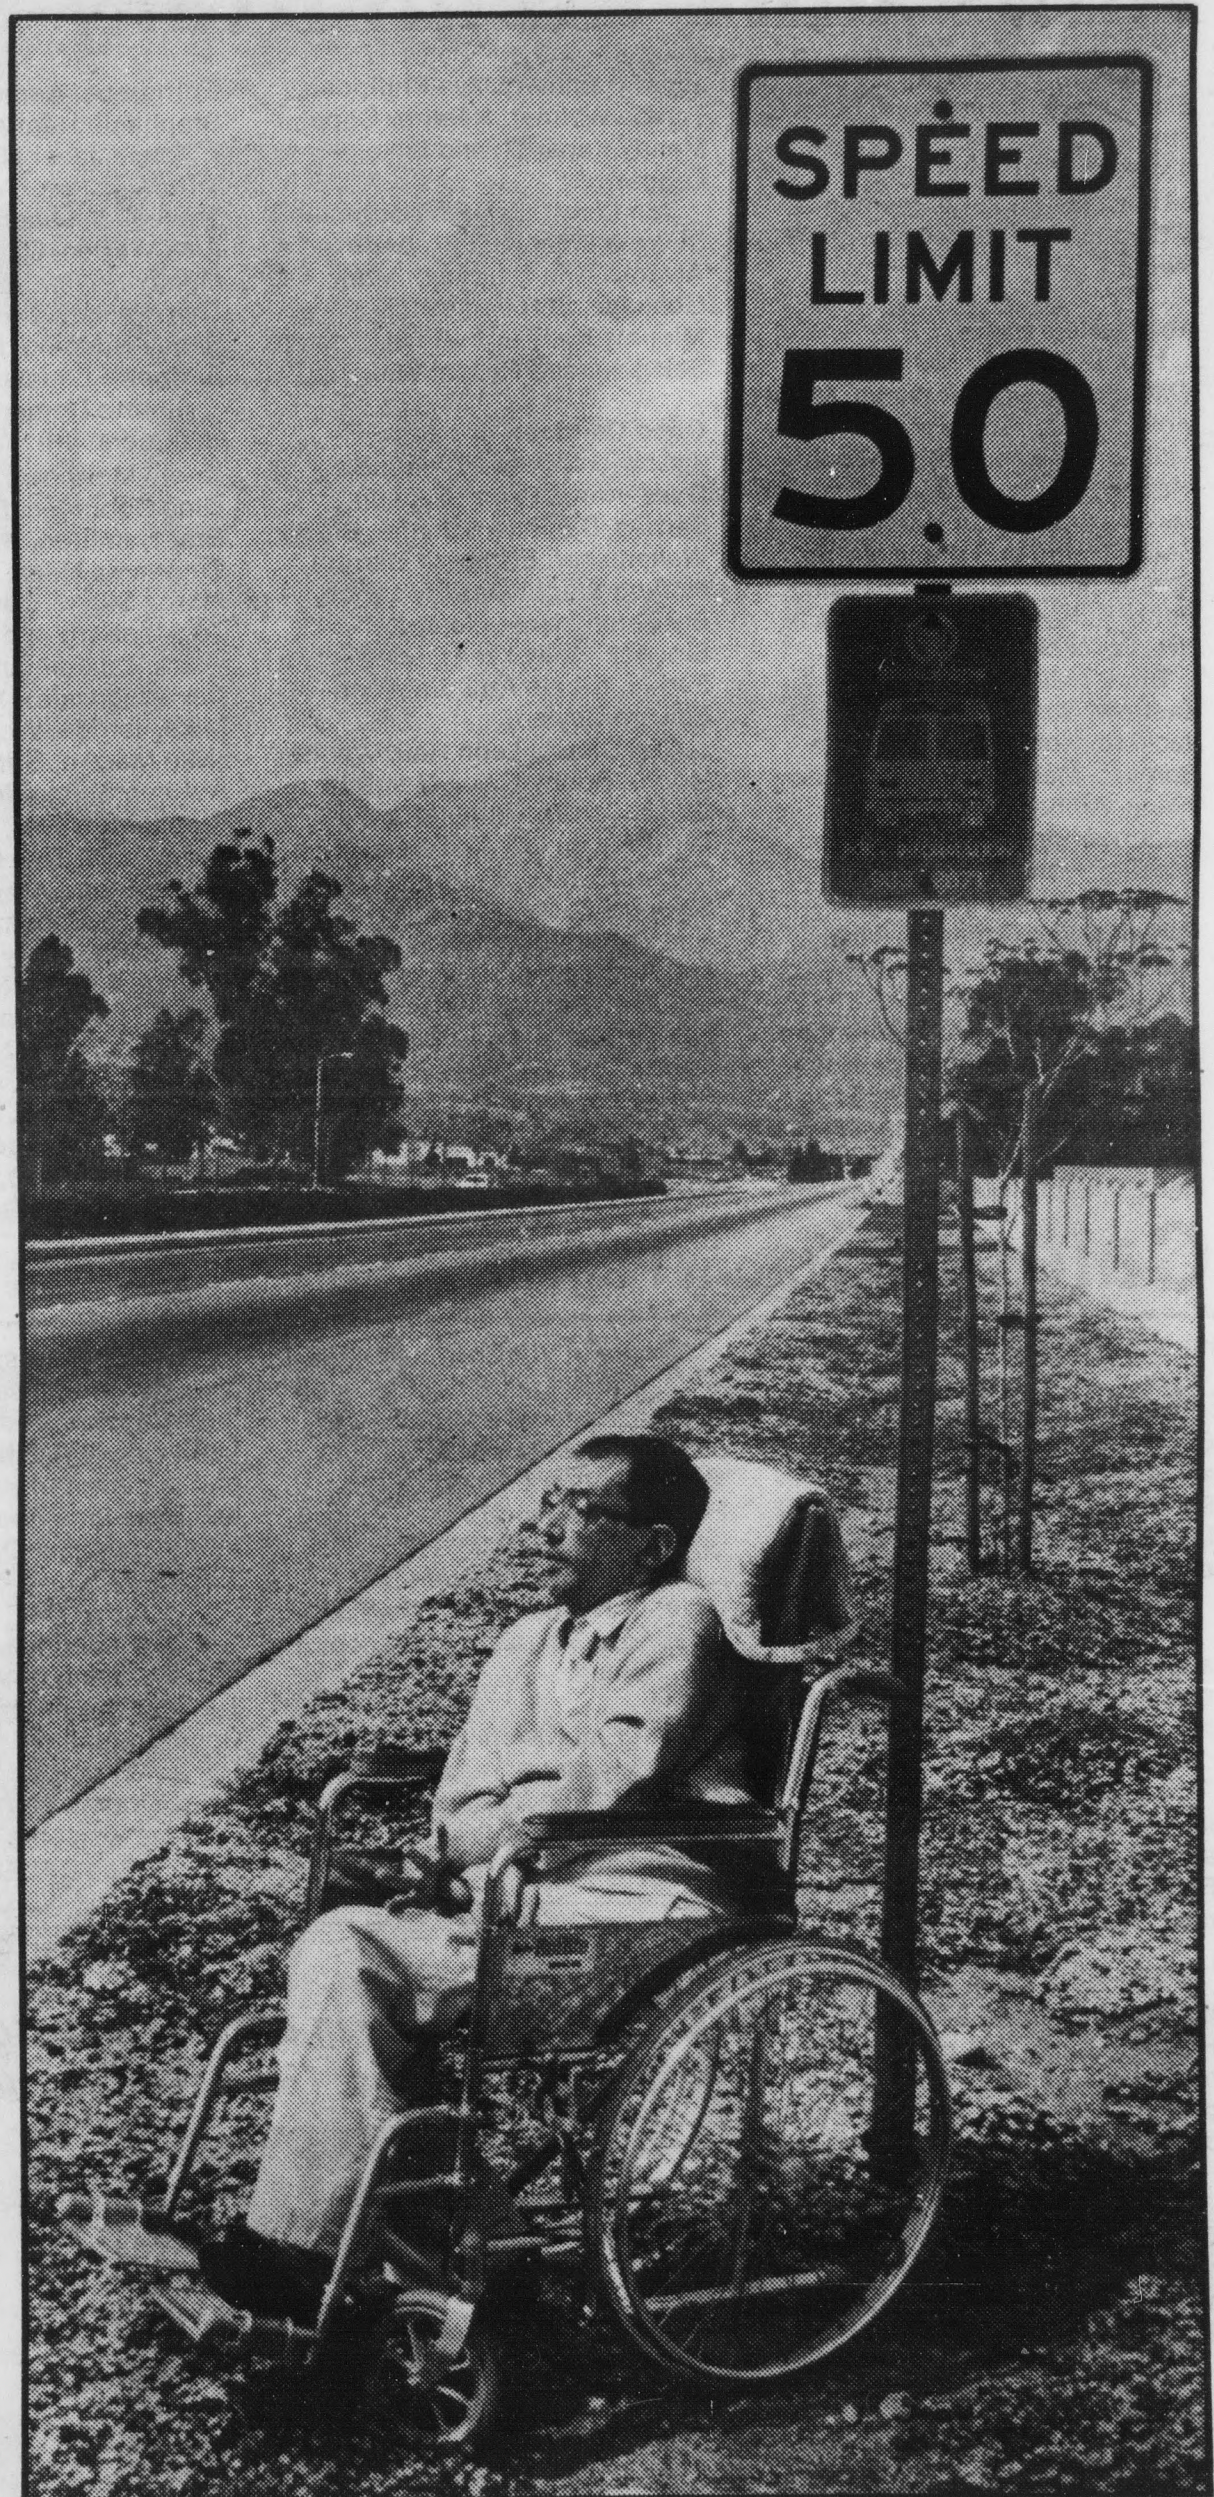

Regarding the two-hour waits for Dial-A-Lift, Dellhime said that is because there are not enough of the vans. There may be some relief when Omnitrans receives 49 additional Dial-A-Lift and Dial-A-Ride vans in July, according to Koenig.

Expanding the routes and hours of Omnitrans is a priority to the less-abled. "There's a very limited number of places you can go," Francisco said. "When the bus shuts down, hey, we don't go anywhere," Daugherty said. Both Daugherty and Toomey complained of being unable to go to church on Sunday when buses don't run. Dellhime said that there were not enough transit passengers on Sunday to enable Omnitrans to provide the service.

American Transit Enterprises, the company which San Bernardino county contracts with to manage its transit services, has not placed a high priority on handicapped services, according to Conners. "They've done a lousy job as far as the handicap are concerned," he said.

"The comment is totally unfounded," General Manager Chafin said.

"Omnitrans has probably done more than 90 percent of the industry toward addressing the needs of the handicap.... Obviously we don't have all the funds in the world.... We're trying to deal with as many people we can.... We just can't be everything to everybody."

Dennis Toomey, dependent on a wheelchair due to cerebral palsy, is not pleased with Omnitrans bus services. An hour after one bus could not pick him up because it was already carrying its limit of one wheelchair passenger, Toomey was again denied a ride (opposite page) because the older bus lacked wheelchair access. Currently 41 of Omnitrans 75 buses have wheelchair accessibility. All new buses are required to grant access. Several city bus stops (above) are located in the midst of thick patches of flowers or verdure in which it is difficult, if not impossible, to maneuver a wheelchair.

R.C. Sheriff's Explorers plan first meeting

The Rancho Cucamonga Sheriff's Explorers will hold its first meeting on May 22 at 7 p.m. at the Rancho Cucamonga Sheriff's Station, 9333 Ninth St.

The program is designed for young men and women, ages 15 to 21, who are interested in law enforcement. The Explorers is sponsored by the Sheriff's Department and the Boy Scouts of America. The participants become involved in a variety of community service projects.

There are no tests required. Applicants must be in good physical condition and have a grade point average of at least 2.0 or higher from high school or college.

Membership is based on the approval of the Explorer staff and advisors. An oral interview is required and a background investigation must be completed prior to an applicant's approval.

Members are required to participate in at least two meetings a month and participate in functions sanctioned by the Sheriff's Department.

For more information, call Deputy Greg Foster or Deputy Bob Terrell at the Rancho Cucamonga Sheriff's Station, 989-6611.

PHOTO TIPS

By Holt Confer Copley News Service

Last week, I introduced you to stock photography — that vast network of businesses that collects, catalogs and markets images to books, magazines, newspapers, advertising agencies, encyclopedias, audio-visual producers and so on.

We're a very visual society — probably the result of excessive television viewing — so the demand for quality images for illustration practically is endless. Of course, not all the pictures you see come from "stock" — many actually are created on assignment. Many of the photographs you see in your daily newspaper or in the weekly news magazines go directly from the staff photographer to the publication because getting those photographs into print while the news still is fresh is quite important.

But even with the news, there are stock picture agencies, such as Contact Press Images, Gamma Liaison and Sipa Press, that have photographers positioned around the world, ready to move to any location where news is being generated. The pictures those photographers take are shipped by air to their individual agencies who in turn market them to the news publications. It's a form of stock photography that functions on a quick-response, quick-turnaround basis.

These news agencies have special requirements for photographers that we won't talk about in this series of columns. Instead, I want to tell you about the stock photo houses that are open to any really good photographer who understands photo illustration and is willing to generate a great many images on speculation.

In a recent column, I mentioned Rohn Engh and his book "Sell and ReSell Your Photos," a "how-to" book for anyone wanting to shoot for stock. However, many of the stock photo houses publish guidelines for their photographers. They feel it's a marketing advantage to get the best images possible from their submitting photographers — and, of course, it's to the photographers' advantage because the better the image, the more likely it is to sell again and again.

A stock house calling itself Stock Imagery (711 Kalamath, Denver, CO 80204) sends potential contributors a list of factors to remember when shooting for stock. Here's what they suggest:

— Leave empty space (sky, grass, water, etc.) in your shot; it gives the art director space to superimpose type without interfering with the subject.

— Try to shoot both vertical and horizontal photos of the subject. Many times a picture can't be used because the format doesn't fit the artist's layout.

— Use a polarizing filter during the day, especially when the sky is included in your image. A polarizer reduces or eliminates glare and increases color saturation. Washed-out (weak color) areas often make a photograph unusable.

— Always try to get model releases so your pictures can be used commercially (the high-paying market). Otherwise your photos only will get editorial use (a lower-paying market), but still nothing you'll want to ignore.

— Make certain the clothing your models are wearing isn't faddish if you want long life for your shots. However, don't overlook the possible short-term benefits of photographing fads such as punk rock hair or sidewalk roller skating.

— Shoot multiple frames of good images. That way, the agency will have several shots on file should they have to fill more than one request for the subject at the same time.

— Remember, the more good images you have on file, the higher your income will be. Most stock photo houses won't accept your work unless you can provide at least 200 potentially salable images — and even then, they will want to have some assurance you will keep sending them images on a regular basis.

— Finally, identify your subject. Photo researchers are very knowledgeable people, but expecting them to recognize every flower, every animal, every state Capitol, every high-tech manufacturing operation is asking too much. There are at least three things that should go on every transparency — your name, a copyright symbol and the identity of the subject.

Next week, more about the stock photo business, including the names and addresses of some of the better-known stock photo houses.

Warriors of the Trimester announced

The results of a staff vote for Warriors of the Trimester were announced at a recent assembly on the campus of Alta Loma Junior High School. Those honored are:

Carrie Sweet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sweet, seventh grade; Aaron Bishop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bishop, seventh grade; Jodi Hurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Hurst, eighth grade; and David Zepeda, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Zepeda, eighth grade.

On the same occasion, Principal James E. Dyer announced the names of the youngsters who, also chosen by the staff vote, were presented with the Academic Accolade trophies for the second semester of this school year.

These youngsters were chosen from a field of the Alta Loma students who earned a grade point average of 4.0 or above. They are:

Carrie Sweet from the seventh grade, who shared her second award with co-winner Dean Diomedes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Diomedes; and eighth grader Carl Baumann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Baumann.

Lunch time sports program concludes

The lunch time sports program at Alta Loma Elementary School recently concluded with the termination of the basketball season. These sports activities have been supervised by upper grade teachers Mr. Keeshen and Mr. McCandless during their lunch hour.

Volunteer teams were chosen to play in tournament competition.

Winners for the boys' basketball tournament were the 76'ers: Andy Obregon, captain; John Reyes; Travis Moody, Jon Dockstader; Ken Ortiz; Steve Bullington; Brian Nielsen; Stefan Elliott; and Nathan Asquith.

Winners of the girls' basketball tournament were: Tonya Westwood; Aileen Manzanarez; Shannon Batson; and Da Lee Pugh.

PETS

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.
Copley News Service

Q. We recently were given a mongrel female puppy by our neighbors. We anticipate that we never will want puppies from this dog.

What is involved in spaying a dog? At what age should she be spayed? Will spaying our dog make her more prone to be fat?

We want to do what is best for our dog.

A. Spaying probably is the most common surgical operation performed on pets. As commonly used, the word "spay" simply means the surgical removal of the female reproductive organs.

Most veterinarians remove both the ovaries and the uterus.

This, of course, prevents the dog from ever being in season, eliminates the nuisance of the male's attention while she is in heat, prevents pregnancy and reduces the chance of developing some forms of cancer.

Although spays are quite routine and complications are few, this is major surgery. A general anesthetic is given. This may be an injectable anesthetic solution or a combination of an injectable and a gaseous anesthesia.

A small incision is made in the flank or along the abdominal midline. Usually the latter side is used and the incision is only 1 to 2 inches in length. The length of this incision is dependent upon the size and condition of the dog. The uterus and ovaries are removed through the incision and then the incision is sutured.

The whole procedure usually can be completed in 15 to 30 minutes. It usually is necessary for the dog to be hospitalized 24 to 48 hours following surgery.

The skin sutures usually are removed seven to 10 days following surgery. The dog should be observed frequently during this period to be certain that she is not chewing on the skin sutures.

The best age for spaying dogs is debatable. Many veterinarians insist on the bitch having at least one heat period prior to spaying. Others recommend that the animal have one litter. Many do not believe that it is necessary or advantageous for a dog to have one heat period or a litter prior to spaying.

Many believe the best age to spay dogs is approximately 6 months, regardless of whether the bitch has been in season or not. At 6 months of age the puppy is large enough to withstand a general anesthetic and young enough to heal rapidly and recover very quickly.

Any age dog can be spayed. Therefore if you choose to allow your dog to have a few litters, she can be spayed as an adult.

Many clients question whether spaying will alter their dog's personality or predispose her to being fat and lazy. There is no evidence in the veterinary literature to indicate that a personality change will occur following spaying. Once the dog fully recovers from the stress of surgery and hospitalization, her temperament and behavior should return to normal.

Spayed or not, dogs tend to gain weight as they age. Therefore your dog's food intake and exercise should be regulated to control her weight. Possible weight gain should not be a reason for not spaying your dog. The only reason for not spaying a female dog is to have puppies.

Once the decision is made not to mate her, she should be spayed or placed on an alternative birth control program. Your veterinarian can give you advice regarding your particular dog.

Valley Preschool invites parents to open house

Valley Preschool Inc. invites preschool-aged children to participate in a free day at the preschool during open house, now through May 22, 9 to 11:30 a.m.

Parents investigating preschools for the fall semester are encouraged to participate in a normal day at Valley Preschool prior to making a decision.

A non-profit, cooperative preschool, Valley offers two-, three- and five-day programs for children 2 1/2 to 5.

Parents help in the day-to-day operation of the school under the guidance of Mary Blincoe, teacher/director.

A nursery is provided for parents who would require a babysitter for younger children while working at the school.

Those attending Free School Days during the open house period will receive a coupon good for one week's tuition should they decide to register.

In order to be properly prepared for the number of extra children each day, the school requests parents call 626-8466 between 9 and 11:30 a.m. for reservations.

The school is at 9185 Monte Vista Ave., Montclair, next to the Montclair Plaza.

Summer school to offer unusual classes this year

By Terri Tirella

The Cucamonga School District Board of Trustees gave the go-ahead to a new summer school plan to be submitted to the State Department of Education for funding, at its meeting last week. The district will get about $13,500 for summer school expenses, said Karen Neal, director of instructional services.

Summer school would focus on core academics and proficiency remediation for eighth graders and would be offered to all Cucamonga district students. For the last three years, summer school was designed only for students who hadn't passed competency tests.

The program is currently based on two block sessions: one from July 1 through July 16 and another from July 17 through July 31. The sessions and classes will enable the district to serve 420 students.

But what is unique about the program is that it is designed to enrich students through unusual course work, according to Ray Trujillo, acting superintendent.

Teachers will be allowed to present what they would like to teach during the block. The teachers and classes will be selected by a district panel.

Study topics will focus on language arts and math skills, Neal said.

Teachers will have to submit proposals, which should include a unifying theme and what materials they might need for their project, to the district panel.

Neal said the summer school program will provide an opportunity for teachers to focus on a particular interest they have and plan course work around that theme, whether it is kitchen science or delving into Rancho Cucamonga's history.

"It could be something about dinosaurs, or lizards, pets or maybe something with computers," Neal said.

Class curriculum should be focused on the teacher's strengths and interests. "It can be something they may want to do during the year but don't have the time, or give them an opportunity to try a pilot program," she said.

All summer school classes will be offered at Cucamonga Elementary School, with three classes offered each block session. Each block will have three teachers and two aides.

"We're trying to build in as much flexibility for the students as possible," Neal said. "It's for the kids and we don't want to compete with swimming lessons or summer vacations."

Neal said summer school is important to students "to keep in touch with school and keep skills from being lost."

Mayor's Prayer Breakfast set

The annual Upland Mayor's Prayer Breakfast is scheduled May 6 at 7 a.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, 869 N. Euclid Ave.

The chaplains division of the Upland Police Department is sponsoring the program. Robert Vernon, assistant chief of the Los Angeles Police Department will be the guest speaker.

Tickets are $5. Tickets may be obtained from the mayor's office at City Hall, 460 N. Euclid Ave. or the Christian Light Bookstore, 343 N. Second Ave.

Anyone wanting to protect themselves from obtaining sexual advertising in the mail can receive help from the Postal Service, according to Upland Postmaster David Jordan.

By making out Postal Service form 2150, anyone who receives an ad for material he finds erotically arousing or sexually provocative can obtain an order against the mailer that will prohibit the sender — 30 days after receiving the order — from making any further mailings to an addressee listed on the form.

Filling out Postal Service form 2201, Jordan said parents and their children, under 19 years old, can get on a Postal Service list of people who don't want that kind of advertisements through the mail.

"It then becomes unlawful for anyone to mail such an advertisement to any individual whose name and address have been on the list for more than 30 days," Jordan said.

Host families needed for visiting Japanese students

Host families are being sought to house 32 high school students from Japan who will be visiting the Rancho Cucamonga and Upland area this summer from July 20 to Aug. 7.

The students are about 17 years old and will be studying American language and culture

The program is sponsored by International Training and Exchange, Inc., which provides study experiences for the students while in this country.

Any family interested in providing room and board for a Japanese student may contact the coordinator of the program, Vicki Ackley, 987-7835 or Donna Neward, 987-0796.

Uplander celebrates her 100th birthday

Pansy Clewett of Upland was honored recently on her 100th birthday at a reception held at the First United Methodist Church, Upland (Cathedral of the Foothills).

Pansy Gertrude Macy was born April 21, 1885, in Hubbard, Iowa, to Sarah Jane and Clarence P. Macy. In 1888, her father came to Elsinore with his brother, Edwin, to find work and establish a home for his family. Coming to California by train a few months later were Pansy, her mother and two brothers. Also on the train were the family cow and some horses.

Later, five more children were born and their father moved small houses together to make a home large enough for his family. He became the proprietor of a large general merchandise store in Elsinore and also raised race horses and percherons.

On Oct. 4, 1908, Pansy married Howard Clewett of Elsinore and they later moved to San Pedro, where a daughter, Lillian (now Mrs. Schubert of Upland) was born. In 1911, they moved to Iamasa (now Alta Loma), where Florence (now Mrs. Cal Zimmerman of Yucca Valley) was born.

The next move was to an orange grove on Mountain Avenue at 26th Street in San Antonio Heights, Upland, where a daughter, Elinor Mae, was born and lived only two and one-half years. Not long after her death, a son, Raymond, was born. He now lives with his wife, Hazel, in Malibu.

In each place where they lived, the Clewetts joined the Methodist church. Clewett has long been active in children's work in church, beginning at the age of 16 as a Sunday school teacher. In San Antonio Heights, she became superintendent of the junior Christian endeavor and teacher of the high school Sunday school class.

After 25 years in the heights, the Clewetts remodeled a home they owned on Fifth Avenue in Upland, moved in and again attended the Methodist church, where Clewett became junior department superintendent in the Sunday school. She supervised the children's library and audio-visual work. She kept up this work until at more than 90 years of age, she gave up driving her car. Not long afterward, she fell and has had progressive difficulty in walking.

She sold the Fifth Avenue home where she had lived alone since her husband died in 1943 and now is living with her daughter Lillian Schubert in Upland.

"She keeps herself cheerful and busy with Bible study, church literature, crossword puzzles and games of Scrabble, when she can find an opponent," Schubert said of her mother. "She likes to say, 'I haven't an ache or a pain. There is nothing wrong with me except my legs.'"

Class on beauty concepts for girls 11-14 set at R.C. community center

Rancho Cucamonga Community Services Department is offering beauty concepts for girls ages 11 through 14.

The class will focus on application of makeup, styles of clothing and coloring. Class meets Mondays at 6 p.m. for five weeks, beginning May 6, and costs $7.50.

A class in color and style analysis is also being offered for women ages 16 through adult. How color affects people, their personalities, wardrobes and make-up will be discussed.

The class fee of $15 includes an individual color analysis. The five-weeks of Monday night sessions at 7 p.m. begin May 6.

Both of the beauty courses will be held at Lions Park Community Center, 9161 Base Line Road.

Oil painting classes will begin on May 15 at the Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center, 9791 Arrow Highway. The class will be held on Wednesday afternoons, 1 to 4 p.m., for six weeks.

For more information and registration, call Rancho Cucamonga Community Services Department at 989-1851, extension 213.

STAMPS

By Lea Blauvelt
Copley News Service

A 6-cent coil stamp featuring an 1880s tricycle will be issued May 6 in Childs, MD, without first-day ceremony. The denomination meets the new basic minimum per-piece rate for third-class bulk mailings by non-profit organizations, effective Feb. 17.

Tricycles today are used principally by children too young to balance on two wheels. The invention of the hub brake and differential used in automobile design came about as a result of the development of the tricycle.

The tricycle is an outgrowth of the development of bicycles and the velocipede, created about 1861 by Pierre and Ernest Michaux of France. Their two-wheeled vehicle was propelled by pedals attached to the front axle.

By the 1880s, the average front wheel of a velocipede measured 52 inches, making the seat dangerously high for the average adult. Consequently, the public turned to tricycles for general use, and adults still use them in Britain despite the fact that Americans still associate them with children.

Designed by James Schleyer, the stamp is part of the ongoing Transportation Series, which was initiated in 1981. Across the top two lines of type appear "Tricycle 1880s" and "6USA" with the tricycle below. It will be issued in coils of 500 and 3,000 stamps.

Procedures for ordering first-day cancellations follow:

Collectors affixing stamps purchased at local post offices to addressed envelopes should send them to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Tricycle Stamp, Postmaster, Childs, MD 21916-9991. (Since a minimum of 22 cents postage is required, either affix a coil of four of the stamps, or one, plus 16 cents extra postage on each cover.)

Collectors desiring the USPS to affix the stamps should send addressed envelopes and 22 cents for each cover (in check form only) to the address above, making two changes. Delete "Customer-Affixed Envelopes" and change the last four digits of the ZIP code to "9992."

Postmark all orders by June 5. HERE AND THERE — Switzerland's Pro Patria stamps for this year carry a musical theme. Five musical instruments preserved in Swiss museums were selected and shown on the stamps, to be issued May 28, continuing a series of treasures in institutions begun last year on these annual semi-postals. Pro Patria stamps began in 1952.

Subjects pictured on this year's stamps, along with denominations, were: one of the first wooden music boxes for which the Swiss are famous (25 plus 10 centimes); a "rattle" — a wooden, toothed cylinder and lamella that produce a penetrating rattle when turned (35 plus 15 centimes); an Emmental necked zither (50 plus 20 centimes); the oldest Swiss drum — from Basel (70 plus 30 centimes); and a "Schwyzeroergeli," or small accordion, used in homes for folk dances (80 plus 40 centimes).

The surtax on the Pro Patria stamps will be divided: 90 percent will go to the 1986 Pro Patria Fund and 10 percent to three Swiss welfare funds used for Swiss social or cultural programs.

Men and women: The difference may lie deep in center of brain

By Jan Stevens
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Women may be better suited than men at skills such as drawing or creative writing, but less effective at specialized work demanding single-minded concentration, in the opinion of a UCLA neuropsychologist.

Eran Zaidel, who has been studying the functions of the brain for 15 years, says women may have a natural proclivity for tasks that integrate the various departments within the brain.

But when they set out to do tasks using one side of the brain only, they can be distracted by the other side, a phenomenon Zaidel calls "traffic."

"Things that require very specialized abilities, that are best done by one side alone, I think would be done worse by women because one side interferes with the other," Zaidel said.

For example, he said, men generally perform better than women in abstract reasoning tasks such as imbedded-figures tests, where they must find a recurring geometric figure in various diagrams.

Such differences rest in the fact that women and left-handers possess a better corpus callosum, a hard fibrous band in the center of the brain that bridges its two hemispheres, Zaidel said. The corpus callosum assists in switching information from one side of the brain to the other.

While such flexibility is advantageous for complex functions involving more than one department of the brain, it can make focusing attention on a specialized task more difficult, Zaidel said.

COINS

By Gary L. Palmer
Copley News Service

Unusual designs highlight four new silver coins introduced recently as part of the U.N. Decade for Women Coin Program.

The new legal-tender, proof-quality coins are from Malta, Papua New Guinea, Maldives and Seychelles and each coin focuses on the "Women" theme.

Twenty-four silver and 15 gold proof coins are being issued by nations around the globe as part of the special U.N. coin tribute. The new silver issues feature designs celebrating women and recognizing the important roles they play in their homelands.

The five-pound coin from Malta features a woman making lace. Around the design is the inscription "United Nations—Decade for Women," the date, denomination and the dove—symbol of the decade. British sculptor Michael Rizzello designed the coin, as well as the ones from Papua New Guinea and Seychelles.

It was minted at Valcambi, S.A., Switzerland and has the national emblem of Malta on the reverse.

From Papua New Guinea comes a five-kina coin featuring a woman picking coffee beans, a key crop in the tropical nation. The reverse depicts a distinctive bird of paradise. Rizzello's other creation is the 50-rupee coin from the island nation of Seychelles. It depicts Seychellois women engaged in industry, agriculture and sport. There is a scene from a bottling plant, a maker of cinnamon quills displaying her product and a woman enjoying windsurfing.

An outline of Mahe, the principal island and site of the capital city of Victoria, provides the backdrop. The reverse features the Seychelles coat of arms and the date. It is the only coin of the four dated 1985. The others bear a 1984 date.

The fourth coin is the work of Ibrahim Abdul Azeed of the Maldives Monetary Authority. It is his country's 20-rufiyaa coin for the Decade for Women collection. It portrays a woman making lace on a pillow with gold and silver thread.

The lace is used traditionally as embroidery on the collars of Maldivian women's dresses and it always has been made locally. The reverse highlights the coat of arms with the name Maldives in both English and Maldivian and the Hejira equivalent date of 1405. The Royal Mint of Britain produced this piece as well as the Seychelles coin.

Other countries participating in the Decade for Women Coin Program include Belize, Bhutan, Bulgaria, People's Republic of China, Ethiopia, Hungary, Jamaica, Lesotho, Mongolia, Solomon Islands, Sudan, Tanzania, Turkey and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Further information on the special coin program may be obtained from Francis L. Kellogg, Executive Director, United Nations Decade for Women Coin Programme, 866 United Nations Plaza, Suite 410, New York, NY 10017.

Barely a month ago we mentioned Banco de Mexico had issued the 1984 silver Libertad, the world's only 1-ounce, .999 fine silver coin with legal tender status. The coins are dated annually and not restruck in any year. The issue — nearly 3 million coins — quickly sold out and Mexico moved rapidly to release the 1985 edition.

Featuring the winged angel, which represents victory and independence for Mexico, the Libertads are available at more than 1,000 coin dealers, banks and brokerage houses nationally.

"Are there natural or experimental conditions that will allow you to stop the traffic in the corpus callosum? We don't know, and we're trying to find out," he said, adding that researchers are studying whether deep relaxation, meditation, hypnosis and biofeedback can help slow or speed up brain traffic.

Zaidel said UCLA's research focuses on behavioral rather than anatomical differences in male and female brains. He and other researchers reached their conclusions after conducting behavioral tests in which a dot was placed on a screen. Visual stimuli were flashed to the right or left side of the dot, and research subjects indicated whether the stimuli represented words.

Specialized language tasks were assigned requiring responses from the brain's right or left hemisphere. Zaidel found the responses were clear-cut in men, but not as well-defined in women.

"It could be because women have better bilateral representation of the function, or it could be because they have better corpus callosums, so things transfer more easily," Zaidel said. "From the results we have had recently, it seems that both are true."

But he said men are not always better than women at tasks involving just one part of the brain. For expressive tasks such as speaking, women have no difficulty calling upon just one side. In receptive tasks such as reading or auditory comprehension, however, they have more trouble.

Zaidel added that his evidence on left-handers, although inconclusive, shows that about two-thirds of them have language functions specialized in the left side of the brain, the same place as right-handers. The remaining third have language functions either in the right side or in both sides.

"Left-handers are consistently less lateralized, less specialized than right-handers and have greater callosal connectivity," Zaidel said. "What is the difference between left-handers and women? We don't know that yet."

A.L. students do well at the Science Fair

Students of Alta Loma Junior High School fared well at the recent Science Fair hosted by Pioneer Junior High School in Upland.

Those Alta Loma youngsters who earned trophies with their projects were: Doni Schmalz, Steve Petersen, Trevor Lim, Adrienne Wechselberger, Dave Magruder, Nancy Frey, Chris Crabtree, Ingrid Anderson, Theron Enns, Carrie Sweet and Dustin Hollis.

At the second annual Chaffey College Science Fair, students, Trevor Lim and Steve Peterson placed second in Biological Science and Physical Science respectively.

Mother-daughter contest slated at Orange Show

Mother and daughter look alike are invited to compete at the Orange Show on closing day, Sunday at the Citrus Stage.

The contest will start at noon. Pre-registration will begin at 11 a.m. backstage. All contestants must be registered by 11:30 a.m.

Three age groups will be judged: mothers with daughters 5-12; mothers with daughters 13-19; and mothers with adult daughters.

Judging will be in three categories: looks, dress and mannerisms.

There is no entry fee other than an admission ticket for each contestant to the 70th National Orange Show.

Moms are wonderful

On May 9, the Upland News will publish aspecial tribute to mothers. Sons and daughters of all ages are invited to submit a short article about their mothers to be included in the tribute.

Send the article to the Moms are Wonderful, Upland News, P.O. Box 4000, Ontario, CA 91761.

Speakers to discuss occupations at school

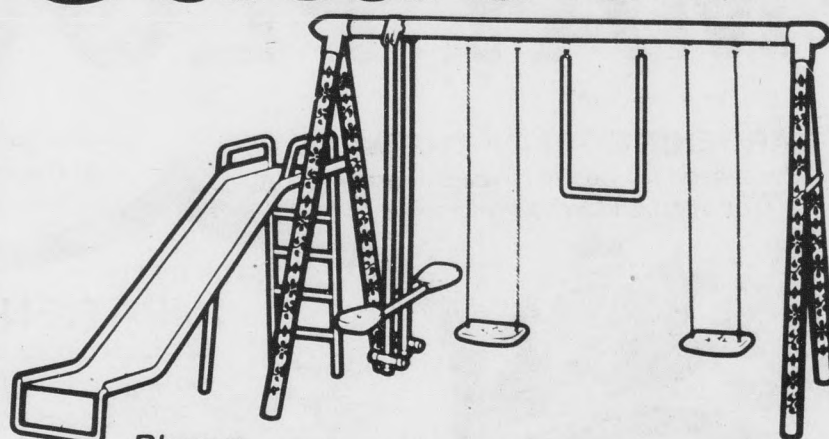

Central School students will hear a variety of speakers discuss their occupations during Career Day on May 8.

Parents and other local residents who work in police departments, fire departments, local retail businesses and the helping professions will speak to students in kindergarten through sixth-grade classes.

Upland High School's Lisa Gillespie will be in action at the Baseline League finals today and Friday at Claremont High.

Fifth women's title for Borba at Red Hill

It's becoming a yearly event. Each spring the Red Hill Country Club Women's Club holds its annual championship and Emily Borba brings the trophy from home.

And, for the past four years, Borba takes it back home for another year following the competition.

Borba won the championship for the fifth consecutive year by compiling a four-round score of 341 over the 5,999-yard, par 74 hilltop course. Her score was 17 strokes better than runnerup Mary Gattas.

Other winners in the championship flight included

Isabel Thomas, low net, and Marge Stonebreaker, second in net scoring.

In the first flight, Maggi Smeltzer and Terry Boggs posted the best gross scores while Donna Burke and Kathy Pruitt were tops in low net.

Bow Duffy and Ann O'Conner paced the second flight with their low scores. Helen Baxter and Vee Hunt led the flight with the low net scores, as did Norma Lesondak and Judy Robertson in the third flight.

Audrey Walburger and Connie Waldron had the low scores in the third flight.

Celtics win league cup

Having captured the Mountain View League Cup, the Upland Celtic under-19 boys team will be in action Saturday against the La Jolla Nomads in a State Cup semifinal at Mt. San Antonio College.

Coach Matt McDonagh's squad defeated the Alta Loma Aztecs by 7-1 and 2-1 scores to win the double elimination league cup. It was the fifth win for the locals, who also defeated San Diego Bonita (5-1), Anaheim Arsenal (1-0) and San Diego Royals (2-1).

Saturday's game, which starts at 10 a.m., is a rematch of last year's final which the Nomads won in overtime.

Legislator wants limits on gun sales

By Robert P. Studer
Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — The Uzi — that squat, military sub-machine gun developed by the Israelis for its assault troops — a weapon that can empty a 20-round magazine in 2 seconds — was displayed for sale to all comers with the $500-to-$600 price at the gun fair recently in Stockton.

"Fourteen steps away," said San Francisco Assemblyman Art Agnos, "you could buy a conversion manual for $6 explaining how to convert the weapon from its semiautomatic state (the only way such a gun can legally be sold in California) to fully automatic."

On another rack, Agnos said, was a display of AR-15 — assault rifles that also can be converted from semiautomatic to fully automatic. And nearby were conversion manuals for those, as well.

Handguns were plentiful, Agnos said — for sale to anyone with the cash. He held up a .22-caliber handgun "similar to the one that was used in the assassination attempt on President Reagan," that was readily sold for $150 to an ex-felon whom Agnos and a pair of agents from the state attorney general's office had escorted to the gun fair to test its sales security. "No questions were asked."

Sale of a weapon to an ex-felon is illegal in California.

And Agnos, "again without any questions being asked, only the payment of $275, which was the only point over which we haggled," was able to buy a .765-caliber Beretta pistol.

The easy accessibility of the latter weapon was particularly galling to Agnos. As he displayed his purchases in the state Capitol, he wore the same suit and belt he was wearing when a gunman shot him point-blank in San Francisco 12 years ago — when he was one of the victims of that city's "Zebra" attacks in which 14 murders, seven other assaults, a rape and a kidnapping were committed.

Agnos took off his coat and showed the bullet hole in the back, and took off the belt to show the bullet hole that had pierced it.

"Both of these holes were made by bullets coming out — after they had gone through my body," he said.

And so Agnos was particularly incensed that he could buy such a weapon with such ease.

"Anyone could buy a gun, walk down the street to a fast food store and hold it up. Nobody would know who had purchased the gun that was used."

That is why, Agnos explained, he is carrying legislation that would restrict the sale of firearms to enable law enforcement to keep a closer watch on who buys them. His AB 1510 would require private sellers of handguns to wait 15 days before handing over the guns to the purchaser so that law enforcement authorities can make a background check on the purchaser. The law, Agnos said, "would place the same rules on private sales of guns as already exist on commercial sales." There is no intent to restrict the sale of guns any further than that.

Agnos's second measure, AB 1509, would limit the sale of semiautomatic "assault firearms" that can be converted to fully automatic weapons only to purchasers who can stand up to a thorough background check by the attorney general. Only a few civilians in the state are now permitted to possess an automatic weapon.

Agnos, a legislator with a flair for the dramatic, said he went "under cover" with the two agents to demonstrate "how easily weapons can be purchased in California by anyone who wants one."

Etiwandan wins Miss R.C. pageant

By Karen Pyke

They glided across the stage in gowns and bathing suits and some of their knees even knocked but when it was over, most of the 19 contestants of the Miss Rancho Cucamonga Beauty Pageant agreed it had been enjoyable and worthwhile even if they didn't win.

Winner of the crown and a $500 scholarship, Etiwanda High School student Shelly Choate, 17, will represent the city at special events throughout the year and will attend Rancho Cucamonga Chamber of Commerce socials, including the monthly mixers.

First runner-up Jamie Blundell, 18, won a $300 scholarship and the Miss Foothill Fire District crown. Tresa Slatinsky, 18, won a $200 scholarship as second runner up.

"It was very close in the scoring," said Bette Carline, communications director for chamber, which sponsored the pageant. We (were) looking for somebody whose going to be able to handle adults at the age of 17 or 19 years old. And, frankly, all the girls could do it. We had a great field of contestants this year," Carline added. She said that the individual scores of contestants were not released to protect those who score low in the competition.

The most important aspect of the judging was the personality interview which took place one week before the pageant on April 20. "It's not a beauty pageant," Carline said. She said that for next year's pageant the word "beauty" will be eliminated and it will be called the Rancho Cucamonga Pageant. At this time it is not known if next year's pageant will include the bathing suit competition, she added.

"I really enjoyed being in it. It was a lot of fun, said contestant Melinda Durbin. "I was nervous because I was the first one to go out on stage."

"I felt really good about meeting all the girls," said contestant Shellie Cooper. "The rehearsals were really a lot of fun."

NOTICE OF DEATH OF
MARY S. LIVELY,
aka MARY M. LIVELY

LIVELY
AND OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE
CASE NO. PW-4887

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate of: MARY S. LIVELY, aka MARY M. LIVELY.

A petition has been filed by LOUISE D. WEBER in the Superior Court of San Bernardino County requesting that LOUISE D. WEBER be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act.

A hearing on the petition will be held on May 17, 1985 at 8:30 A.M. in Dept.: D-6, located at 1540 North Mountain Avenue, Ontario, CA 91762.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should either appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court or present it to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 700 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may serve upon the executor or administrator, or upon the attorney for the executor or administrator, and file with the court with proof of service, a written request stating that you desire special notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of the petitions or accounts mentioned in sections 1200 and 1200.5 of the California Probate Code.
